RAILWAY FRANCHISE MAY END TO-MORROW

Richmond and Henrico Company Must Post Certificate for $100,000 or Abandon Project to Build Viaduct and Street-Car System.

Build Viaduct and Street-Car System.

Unless a certificate of deposit of $100,000 in some national bank in Richmond is placed in the hands of City Cierk Ben T. August by the hour of closing business to-morrow the franchise rights of the Citizens' Rapid Transit Company, now known as the Richmond and Henrico Railway Company, will become null and void.

The franchise is an old one, and has been before the City Council in one form or another for the past eight or ten years. Many extensions have been granted the proposed company, the last one being approved on June 22, providing that the company must file with in some national bank in the city of $100,000, as an evidence of good faith and intention to erect the street ralisms and viaduct from Shockee to Church Hilf, over Marshall Street.

Church Hill representatives in the Council, to have the city build the wand duct over Marshall Street, and to abandon the street railway scheme.

The history of the movement for this street car system and viaduct covers a period of eight or ten years, and is much involved with the history of the street car systems of Richmond. W. F. Jenkins, a Richmond electrician of some note, and the inventor of several patents used in street car operation, including a scheme for double overhead trolleys, designed to minimize electrolysis, and an underground system, was largely interested in securing from the city the franchises for the Broad Street lines, known as the Richmond Traction Company, opened to travel in 1896. Later he left that company and began the formation of a new company, to operate a system here on which his patents were to be used. Shortly before the new State Company and began the formation of a new company, to operate a system here on which his patents were to be used. Shortly before the new State Constitution went into effect, on July 10, 1902, which document materially changed the process by which Virginia cities might issue franchises to public service corporations, the City Council service corporat

Will Urge City to Build.

The amount so placed on deposit is to be drawn solely to some construction company or contractor for actual work done in pursuance of the franchise, the warrants to be approved by the City Engineer. In the event that no money is produced, a move will at once begin, under the leadership of Church Hill representatives in the Council, to have the city build the wardout over Marshall Street, and to abandon the street railway scheme.

The history of the movement for this

August, expires to-morrow.

Among Councilmen there is a generally expressed belief that the money will not be put up, and that the franchise will now be allowed to lapse, the new management of the Virginia. Railway and Power Company having shown no inclination to purchase the franchise. franchise.

Church Hill Wants It.

In support of this, they say that the proposed street railway line would not develop a paying territory, while at the same time it would serve to cripthe same time it would serve to crip-ple and handicap several of the pres-ent lines, and prevent their giving the service which may reasonably be ex-pected. The vladuct also, it is claimed, will hardly pay on a toll basis. Coun-climan Lynch, of Jefferson Ward, is climan Lynch, or Jeterson ward, is leading a movement to have the city, build the viaduct as a public open thoroughfare, to bring the upper end of Church Hill closer to the heart of the business section. The city might, then lease the right of way for street; cars, and in that way meet a part of the interest on the outlay. In that event it is probable that the Broad and Twenty-fifth Street line would be diverted from Broad Street at Four-teenth, and taken to Marshall, thence by the viaduet to Church Hill. Should the franchise of the Richmond and Henrice, Unillyan, be declared weight. Henrico Railway be declared void, it is certain that there will be a propo-sition before the Council shortly look-ing to the erecton of the viaduat by

W. E. Duke, of Norfolk, Must Answer Charge of Grand Lareeny.

[Specia: to The Times-Dispatch.]

NEWPORT NEWS, VA., August 19.—

W. E. Duke, a lumber merchant of Norfolk, was arrested here to-day on the charge of grand larceny. He was released on ball for his appearance by the Police Court to-morrow morning, George W. Bonds becoming his security.

The charge against Duke is made by C. B. Nolms, head of a local real estate and insurance firm, and it is claimed that the giving of a worthless draft for $50 led to the arrest.

Duke says he explained that the man upon whom he drew owed him money and he thought the draft would be honored. He claims that Nelms agreed to give him time in which to make the paper good.

Effinger—Hatchett.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
LYNCHBURG, VA., August 19.—Yesterday afternoon at the rectory of Grace Memorial Episcopal Church, Miss Helen Chilton Hatchett, of this city, was married to George Washington Effinger, of Harrisonburg. The ceremony was performed by the rector, Rev. E. R. Carter.

Because of illness in the bride's family, the marriage was informal. After a visit with relatives at South Boston and Harrisonburg, Mr. and Mrs. Effinger will go to Thomasville, Ga., where Mr. Effinger is principal of the high school. Effinger-Hatchett.
